That Doesn't Impress Him, as He Shuts Door on Thousands in Texas.

"Take my advice, Frank, and steel clear of New York. You'll meet your Waterloo. I preached there two years ago, and they walked out on me."

That's the advice the Rev. J. Frank Norris got from a fellow preacher who had occupied the very pulpit during a revival meeting some time ago from which the "Texas Tornado" is thundering daily.

"Well, Bill," I said, "I don't think I'll meet my Waterloo. New York's got the faith and the vision-all they I'm going to see what I can do," to be turning them away every night.

added, "because I'm accustomed to shutting the doors on about a thousand people every Sunday in my church down at Fort Worth and New York crowds don't impress me very much. But the plowing and the dynamiting that Straton has been doing here is now bearing fruit and if the churches would follow with religion on a big scale there'd be a real revival of Christianity right here in New York.

were coming in voluntarily in satisfactory numbers and within a few days he is going to make a public appeal. Although he has been called the most effective revivalist in the South and has held successful meetings from Boston to Los Angeles, he does not like to be known as a "professional revivalist, even though he spends about half the year preaching throughout the country. First of all he is the pastor of what is said to be the largest Protestant church in the world in Fort Worth, Texas. It has a membership of 5,400 and a Sunday school attendance of over 6,000. "We have five buildings down there," he said, "one of them devoted exclusively to the young people, and when you get as big a membership as we have in a town of 150,000 people religion is something to be reckoned with."

The Tornado is particularly proud of the fact that through his influence the dean of the Southern Methodist Univerity at Dallas was removed and another rofessor at the Balley University was orced to resign after both of them had

"I've just had an invitation to take to of the churches in Chicago," he said "Tve Just had an invitation to take the of the churches in Chicago," he said, and if's a great temptation. A committee called on me a short time ago a asked me to consider the proposal. If I've got everything fixed up so icely down in Fort Worth that I hate a go. There's more religious spirit in the church to practy. Take for instance the Moody burch. That's the warmest church i've ever preached in."

A call for conversions is going to be issued by the Tornado within a few days and repeated daily at his meetings. He expects to be here two weeks longer. "I think they'll begin to come in," he said. "The Christian layman is all right. It's the ministers who are backsliding."

The subject of his sermon at the Calvary Baptist Church to-night will be "What Happened When I Met the Pope."

Four months ago Jimmy Delaney, 13, lay in a clean white hospital cot in the shadow of what seemed like death, or at best only a fraction of happy life as a cripple. Both thighs and his skull were fractured because an automobile had run over him when he was coming home from school one afternoon last November. Jimmy had pluck and the finest medical treatment that Reconstruction Hospital could provide.

Yesterday, eight weeks after the days of white cots and, white clad nurses had passed, and altogether in appearance like any normal youngster, Jimmy had the proud privilege of scooping from a narrow trench a spade of sod, the fourth and last to mark the breaking of ground for an addition to Reconstruction Hospital, 160th street and Central Park West, the hospital which had brought him back to life.

In conformity with this opinion he labeled his sermon yesterday "Why the Present Day Protestant Churches Should Go Into the Hands of a Receiver." He said:

"The church of to-day has left the simple life of the New Testament and built up a topheavy ecclesiastical mathins, with too many prelates, blshops, lenders," and religious dictators. The church has sold its birthright for a mess of pottage. Too often the slogan of our reat denominational gatherings is not How many souls were saved," but 'How many millions were raised?"

"Why is there a great chasm between the church and the masses—the laboring classes? They are not fools. They have een the church bow down to Mammon and have lost faith in its sincerity. Even much of our modern evangelism is out for numbers and for a big purse. Imagine the Apostle Paul conducting a meeting in a great city and having it published over the world that he received $100,000 for his personal services!"
